

Statement Regarding Outcome of GW Lawsuit

Written by Povohost - Last Updated Tuesday, 15 October 2013 09:12

Since we agreed to settle our differences with Jack Russell, we are hearing some confusion about what each band is doing. We are now posting here three documents that should help clear that up. The first document assigns Jack Russell's trademark rights in "Great White" to Mark Kendall, Michael Lardie and Audie Desbrow. The second is a license from the band back to Jack Russell so that he can use the name "Jack Russell's Great White." The third is an agreed-upon injunction against uses of "Great White" that aren't allowed in the settlement agreement (which we are not posting).

These are the plain documents - no spin. Anyone interested can read them. We believe our arrangement lets both bands perform without confusing our fans, who spend their time and money coming to see Great White songs played live. Thanks for your continued support. We hope to see you all soon.
